

The DAY of CRISIS

Intelligence Bulletin

n°1, 2021

Major International Crisis Expected by the End of April 2022

[Confidential]

By Cynthia Holmes

The Hague, the Netherlands, 1 December 2021

Crises are unpredictable by their very nature; it is therefore impossible at this stage to predict what could happen in some months from now, but there seems to be serious reason for concern. This is why agencies specialized in international crisis management, which offer their services during Days of Crises, are already preparing for any eventuality.

According to reliable sources familiar with current international issues, certain themes may be particularly conducive to the outbreak of a global crisis in the near future. These themes are related to activities of espionage, fisheries and other maritime activities, causes and consequences of climate change, international investment, and arbitration.

Disclaimer - This document is part of the "Day of Crisis Competition". Its content is created for the sole purpose of the competition, which simulates real-life situations.